Run! Here come the millennials!

I recently was watching a rerun of “60 Minutes”—What? Morley Safer is a badass!—that included a story about millennials, the 80 million-strong group of Americans born between 1980 and 1995 (their numbers, not mine).

The piece basically was about how Millennials are going to end the modern business infrastructure as we know it, complete with hellfire, brimstone and Beer Fridays.

I suddenly realized, “My God, I’M A MILLENNIAL!” I was horrified, but then I felt a sudden urge to walk into a Fortune 500 company and use my entitlement, need for approval and ego to lay waste to all I see, like a J.Crew-clad Conan the Barbarian.

It’s not just “60 Minutes” giving us the business. A recent New York Times piece freaked out about the fact that millennials may want to watch an episode of “Kenan & Kel” from time to time. I mean, who doesn’t love when Kel describes his lust for orange soda?

Seriously though, the unrelenting fear and concern I’m hearing from older media personalities when reporting on my generation has led me to believe that I may be an active participant in the smuggest hell-raising group of Americans since the cast of “Jackass.” No one likes to be the odd man out, so I set out to find out what previous generations don’t like about us millennials.

I decided to start my polling with the generation before mine, so I called my aunt, a member of Generation X. I asked, “What do you think about these millennials?”

She snarled, “They don’t understand what good TV is! All these reality shows, this ‘Jersey Shore’ nonsense. Back in my day, we watched quality shows like ‘The Real World!’”

After that exercise in redundancy, I didn’t feel any better about the whole thing. I then called my buddy’s dad, who grew up in the ’60s. I asked for his thoughts about millennials and he replied, “What are they contributing to society? All they do is crave attention, lounge around and get into mischief. They have no unifying spirit, no motto to stand by.”

“Oh? What was the motto for young people back in your day?” I responded.

“Sex, drugs and rock ’n’ roll,” he said. “Why do you ask?”

Quite honestly, I’m confused. On the surface, it looks like there’s a lot of people glossing over the hard-working, entrepreneurial and pragmatic attitudes of many of my peers, conveniently lumping us all together as emotionally needy do-nothings. Millennials have a lot in common with older groups, you know. Generation X had the crack epidemic; we have Facebook. But I get it—there’s a generation gap. For the life of me though, I still can’t figure out why all these older folks keep dumping on millennials.

Oh wait, I know. They had to listen to people older than them tell them how much they suck, too. Way to pay it forward, guys.

Gonna party like it's your birthday

While the debt ceiling debate raged on in Washington this week, a funny thing happened: Three big milestones popped up without much fanfare. Apparently the threat of worldwide financial meltdown is that big of a deal. Whatever the case, RedEye couldn't let these anniversaries pass without some mention. Without further ado, the week's big birthdays.

OBAMA TURNS 50

President Obama joined the half-century club Thursday, and he was in Chicago on Wednesday for a celebration and fundraiser in Uptown. Jennifer Hudson and Mayor Emanuel were there. And there were hats. But it's safe to assume that after the bruising debate in Washington this week, the president was more than a little weary during his big night out.

MTV TURNS 30

The fountain of youth network didn't make a fuss over this fact, but it's been 30 years since MTV launched Aug. 1, 1981. Holy crap! While the music channel has come a long way since its debut—and by “come a long way,” we mean “stopped playing videos”—it's still something to talk about. Case in point: the Season 4 premiere of “Jersey Shore” on Thursday. Zing!

LOLLA TURNS 20

Happy Lolla days, Chicago! Now in its seventh year of calling the Windy City home, the little festival that could sure looks a lot different than it did when Perry Farrell envisioned it as a traveling music showcase and sideshow in 1991. Say what you will about its commercialization, this sonic smorgasbord of all things music is a surefire crowd pleaser.

ELECTRONIC MUSIC IS HOTTER THAN EVER—AT Lolla AND ON THE CHICAGO SCENE

By Kyle Kramer | FOR REDEYE

If you're not sure what tropi-glitch-core-bahton is but worry it might be something that sends you to the doctor, you're not alone. In fact, you may already unknowingly be dancing to obscure-sounding genres of electronic music.

"Genres are getting bent and twisted," said Nate Seider, music director at Smart Bar, who also DJs under the name Nate Manic. "It's getting more difficult to categorize a lot of these things these days."

But one thing's clear: Dance music is hot.

Look at sold-out Lollapalooza this weekend in Grant Park. Perry's, its DJ and dance tent, is set to hold 15,000 electronic music fans—twice as many as last year. The influence of the acts booked for Perry's is everywhere right now, from radio singles that incorporate house and dubstep to hip blogs posting experimental electronica and cleverly executed mashups. These genres are all over Chicago, too.

"There is so much going on in the Chicago electronic/dance music scene right now," said Colin Rebey—aka DJ Phenom. "You can go out basically any night of the week and find a solid dance floor and good DJ."

But if all you know is that you wanna get down, go for it—we'll sort out the genres for you. Here's a guide to what it is you're hearing and where you can find it, at Lolla and around town.

Thom Yorke of Radiohead

IDM/GLITCH

Arty rock bands such as Radiohead have been appropriating the sort of down-tempo music that generally gets lumped under the label IDM ("intelligent dance music") for a while, so it may not sound totally unfamiliar. Although no one really seems to like the label, IDM has nonetheless become something of a catch-all term for low-key electronic music that seems created as much for headphones as for the dance floor. "IDM conveys a general feeling that a lot of people like," Seider said. It also tends to focus more on subtle manipulations, a trait that spreads into subgenres such as glitch, which pulls music out of the sounds of technological failures.

See it at Perry's: Modeselektor (7:15 p.m. Sunday) dips into dubstep and uses heavy bass, but the music still barely toes the line at the edge of danceability; Daedalus (2 p.m. Sunday) is part of the same label as the envelope-pushing Flying Lotus; much of his music samples material from the '30s and '40s.

See it in Chicago: Smart Bar (3730 N. Clark St.) has a few upcoming down-tempo dates, with Guillaume and the Coutu Dumonts on Aug. 19, resident DJs Orchard Lounge on Sept. 3 and former Digable Planets DJ King Britt on Sept. 10. Beauty Bar (1444 W. Chicago Ave.) hosts glitchy, experimental night Push Monthly on Aug. 18.

ELECTRO HOUSE

This isn't your older cousin's Chicago house. The contemporary descendant of traditional house music can be distinguished by its noisy, abrasive sounds and distorted vocal samples. Fast, regular tempos and a frenetic, in-your-face energy keeps the music highly danceable, too, which is why you'll hear it in songs from artists such as Ke$ha. "It just makes your body move," said Ephraim Cuellar, of Chicago DJ collective Disco Death Threat.

See it at Perry's: Busy P (6 p.m. Sunday) runs Ed Banger Records, which brought us Justice, and used to manage Daft Punk, so yeah, he knows his stuff. Chuckie (5:45 p.m. Saturday) is a popular Dutch house DJ. Chicago's own Midnight Conspiracy (noon Sunday) also gets a chance to spread their work to the masses. See it in Chicago: Busy P plays Smart Bar (3730 N. Clark St.) on Sunday night after Lolla. The Dutch house music of Friday Lolla performer Afrojack, who produced Pitbull's "Give Me Everything," is often on the playlist at Let's Get Weird on Thursday nights at Evil Olive (1551 W. Division St.), with resident DJs Jimmy-O, Johnny Walker and Disco Death Threat.

DUBSTEP

Whether or not you hold it against it her, Britney Spears has given dubstep its most visible nod with her single "Hold It Against Me." The genre has become trendy club music in its own right, morphing from its jittery origins in dreary-sounding genres such as grime and garage into the blunt broadsides of heavy bass. Characterized by syncopated rhythms, chopped vocals and deep bass lines manipulated to create a wobbling effect, dubstep is something of a battleground between purists frustrated by its mainstream transformation and those who don't mind appropriating it for the dance floor. "Hate it or love it, you can still count on it to turn some heads," Rebey said.

See it at Perry's: Skrillex, the lightning rod for dubstep purists crying foul, performed Friday, but catch his occasional collaborator 12th Planet (5 p.m. Sunday), who also has worked with noted dubstep producer Rusko.

See it in Chicago: Zombies vs. Skeletons party on Wednesday nights at Cobra Lounge (235 N. Ashland Ave.) features dubstep and other bass-heavy music. Smart Bar (3730 N. Clark St.) hosts local and national dubstep artists for Subfix, an event on Thursday nights.

MASHUP

If you've been on the Internet in the past five years, you're probably familiar with the concept: Take two or more songs and mash them together. The idea has spawned more than a few terrible combinations, but in the hands of the right producer a mashup can draw surprising details out of the original sources. "Generally, part of the track is already recognizable and danceable," said Steve Reidell, or STV SLV, half of Chicago mashup duo The Hood Internet. Artists such as The Hood Internet and Girl Talk are pop-music nerds who make music for pop-music nerds, tapping into the dance-floor appeal of mainstream hip-hop and pop while incorporating old-school indie rock and lo-fi electronica (think Biggie and Elton John or MIA and Sufjan Stevens).

See it at Perry's: If you missed Friday's Girl Talk performance, check out the frenetic pop samples of Super Mash Bros. (2:45 p.m. Saturday), or get a taste of mashups from Pretty Lights (8:30 p.m. Saturday), who works hip-hop vocal samples into his music.

See it in Chicago: The Hood Internet, who perform Sept. 2 at Bottom Lounge (1375 W. Lake St.), like to play with longer concepts, such as a whole mixtape of Waka Flocka Flame mashups.

House on fire

Chicago's DJ Lady D represents at Lolla

Darlene Jackson stumbled into DJing by accident, when a promoter saw her spinning records for fun at a shoe store in Lakeview. Since then, DJ Lady D has become a fixture on the Chicago house music scene. If you didn't catch the West Town resident Friday at Perry's, the dance tent at Lollapalooza, hear her every third Monday at Ohm (1958 W. North Ave.), every third Thursday at Crocodile Lounge (1540 N. Milwaukee Ave.), or at Smart Bar (3730 N. Clark St.) on Aug. 17 and Millennium Park's Lunch Break Music Series on Aug. 26. We caught up with her to chat about the state of dance music and being one of few female DJs at Lolla. KK

Describe the music that you play when you're DJing.

I like to say that I'm a hybrid of house, techno and disco.

Do you think those kinds of genre distinctions are important in electronic music? Do they affect the way people respond to the music at all?

To me as a DJ, they are completely irrelevant. To a person who is a consumer, they might be important. ... But from a feelings perspective, people like what they can feel. So I don't know why anybody would limit themselves to a specific thing if they could feel so much more.

Are there any new trends that you're noticing that you're excited about?

[Laughs.] No, I don't think so, not really. I mean, I'm excited about dance music becoming a popular music again. If you turn on the radio, almost everything you hear is dance right now. So that's a trend that I'm very happy about.

Chicago, being the birthplace of house music, has this kind of worldwide legacy. How do you see that legacy reflected in Chicago nightlife today?

It's pretty sad. We're so close to it that maybe it doesn't appear to be as valuable as it does in other parts of the world. There are a lot of talents here that go unrecognized. ... To make money people really have to go to other places. ... A lot of the DJs and producers and remixers here would like to feel that, in their own backyard, they have the same sort of value and worth as they do in other places.

You're one of few female DJs at

DJ Lady D

Lolla this year. What's the deal with that?

Yeah, what is the deal with that?

Is that just kind of the nature of the names that people want to see?

The biggest trend with DJing right now is production, so there might be that barrier to entry. ... When you look at the list of the people playing at Perry's, they're all pretty much producers.

Are there any of the mainstage shows you're excited to see?

I'm from the '80s, so I love the Cars. ... I love Coldplay. ... Damian [Marley] and Nas will be good, I think. Lykke Li. ... Yeah, you're right. It's probably a little imbalanced, but how can you complain when you're there to represent? The best I can do is represent as well as I can.

Fountains of Wayne

By Glenn Gamboa

NEWSDAY

For four albums, Fountains of Wayne—led by the crafty Adam Schlesinger and Chris Collingwood—have built sharp, clever power-pop, smart, detailed, mostly suburban stories driven by polished hooks and catchy guitar riffs.

The new album, “Sky Full of Holes,” ditches the band’s trademark power-pop. This is powerless pop. Much of the rootsier, drifting music practically feels exhausted—a change that’s undoubtedly designed to match the more hopeless stories in these songs.

ALBUM
Sky Full of Holes
Fountains of Wayne

Instead of “Stacy’s Mom,” who not only had it going on but sparked the narrator to intense, upbeat feelings, we get the harried dad of “Action Hero,” who can’t find his keys and is so stressed out that his doctor worries about his health. “He’s an action hero and he’s racing against time,” Schlesinger sings poignantly. “He’s an action hero ... in his mind.”

The fact that it’s one of the most upbeat-sounding songs on the album, alongside the also-up tempo “Someone’s Gonna Break Your Heart,” makes it all the more depressing.

Even when they try to gin up some enthusiasm, as they do in the pretty, acoustic “A Road Song,” which tells of life on tour, they have to poke a hole in it, singing in sweet harmony, “It’s a cliché, but, hey, that doesn’t make it so wrong.”

“Sky Full of Holes” is well built and effective at creating a mood of imminent collapse, but do we really need more of that feeling right now?

Mystery Science Theater 3000: MST3K vs. Gamera XXI

Available now

The 5-DVD set includes the films “Gamera,” “Gamera Vs. Barugon,” “Gamera Vs. Gaos,” “Gamera Vs. Guiron” and “Gamera Vs. Zigra.” Each film gets the usual comedy assault provided by Joel Robinson and his faithful robot sidekicks—Tom Servo and Crow T. Robot. You haven’t really watched these movies until you have seen them with the “MST3K” gang. The DVDs, which include bonus features such as the original Japanese trailers, come in a tin box and includes a poster. RICK BENTLEY, MCT

I Love Lucy!

Various networks beginning Saturday

I remember shedding a tear when Lucille Ball died in 1989; I loved Lucy that much. The Queen of Comedy was a mainstay on our TV when I was growing up, and I still watch her sitcoms in reruns. And I still laugh. The carrot-topped comedienne is being honored with TV marathons Saturday, her 100th birthday. Hallmark Channel will air 102 “I Love Lucy” episodes from 4 a.m. Saturday through 7 a.m. Monday, while Turner Classic Movies will show 14 of her films starting at 5 a.m. Saturday. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

The Suburbs Deluxe Edition

Arcade Fire

The original version of “The Suburbs” seems to be complete enough that it doesn’t need any tinkering, even if it’s hard to begrudge the Montreal art-rock collective for taking a well-deserved victory lap. Appending two unreleased songs, an expanded version of an earlier track, and a short film by Spike Jonze based on the album, “The Suburbs Deluxe Edition” ends up being a case of subtraction by addition, when providing more material and new context takes a little bit away from what already was a winning formula. ARNOLD PAN, POPMATTERS.COM

Young Love

Mat Kearney

There’s a giddiness to much of Mat Kearney’s “Young Love” that’s infectious. Though we’ve gotten used to the oh-so-serious singer-songwriter sounding a certain way in recent years, Kearney busts that convention, adding a touch of island rhythm to the acoustic-guitar base of “Hey Mama” and “She Got the Honey,” a bit of hip-hop in “Chasing the Light” and “Ships in the Night.” Then, on “Learning to Love Again,” Kearney shows he can still beat the sad sacks at their own game, too.

Unless you’re gripped with nostalgia for the hijinks portrayed in ‘80s teen comedies, writer/director Savage Steve

Holland’s 1985 film starring John Cusack as a lovesick high school student may leave you colder than the ski slopes on which Cusack’s character competes. The clichés run rampant and the plot is predictable. Still, Cusack, early in his career, is charmingly offbeat as the hapless Lane Meyer, who resorts to a variety of failed suicide schemes after getting dumped by Beth (Amanda Wyss). BRUCE DANCIS, MCT

Beer and pie, please

By Sara White

Northdown's a people-pleaser. It's an unusual (and by that I mean awesome) combination of beer bar and vegan-friendly restaurant with a pie menu. The staff is friendly, the space is cool and street parking is less painful than expected. What else could Chicago-ans possibly want?

Brunch, of course. So it's no surprise that soon after the Lakeview spot opened in May, it added a morning meal.

Dessert first: Northdown offers about a half-dozen house-made pies ($6 a slice) seven days a week. The cream pies (vanilla brickle and Key lime on my visit), with graham cracker crusts and whipped cream on top, were reason enough to get out of bed in the morning. The flavorless crust on the fruit pies—all vegan—wasn't worth the calories, though I scooped out every last bit of the peach filling.

Northdown Cafe and Taproom

3244 N. Lincoln Ave.
773-697-7578
Brunch hours: 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday

Disappointments: I just couldn't get behind the biscuits. The biscuits and gravy ($9) are available with sausage gravy and two eggs or vegan with porcini mushroom gravy and nicely seasoned tofu scramble. Sadly, the vegan version of the biscuit was bone-dry. So was the buttermilk biscuit—too dry to keep the egg, ham and American cheese together in the biscuit sandwich ($7), though it works with a knife and fork.

Hangover helper: You know how some flour tortillas get all stiff after they've been heated? That's why the poor breakfast tacos ($10 for three) didn't stand a chance, despite roasted poblano salsa and a nice choice of fillings: bacon, cheddar and potato; onion, bell pepper, potato and cheddar; or scrambled tofu, bell pepper, potato and onion. Keep 'em soft, Northdown, or consider corn tortillas. My hangover needs you.

What's for lunch? Go back for the Wisconsin grass-fed burger ($9) or the pulled-pork sandwich ($11, also made vegan with sliced house-made seitan) topped with house-smoked vinegar slaw.

Day drinking: Northdown has a slammin' selection of craft beers. (On draft right now: Ommegang Aphrodite and 3 Floyds Dreadnaught, among others. On its bottle list: Green's Quest, a gluten-free Belgian tripel from De Proef.) Also, a fine lineup of brunch cocktails: beermosas, mimosas, bloody marys and brass monkeys (a 40-ouncer of Miller High Life served in a champagne bucket with fresh-squeezed OJ on the side).

Bottom line: Northdown is already getting raves at lunch and dinner for its pork fries and vegan cassoulet, so brunch is sure to find its groove. Until then, don't be shy if you want beer and pie for breakfast. Northdown wants to make you happy; you can feel it.

The buzz: At last this

CGI-filled prequel can answer the nagging question from fans of the 1968 film: How did this ape society get started?

The verdict: Either make the apes' progression of power intense and frightening or ridiculous and fun. Trying for both doesn't work, and "Rise" frustratingly hops between serious sci-fi and campy, go-for-broke absurdity. (I'm talking about a chimp riding a horse here.)

The effects, however, are fantastic. Disposable, unintelligent human characters (including Freida

Who's following Dent's footsteps to the Hall of Fame?

By Scott Bolohan | FOR REDEYE

The Bears' all-time sack leader, Richard Dent, will be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Saturday in Canton, Ohio. His career was legendary, but to put it kindly, the Bears haven't produced much supreme talent since Dent's 1985 team. However, with the Bears reaching the Super Bowl in 2007 and the NFC championship game last season, the core of this team has talent. Here's a look at some current players' Hall chances. SCOTT BOLOHAN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

BRIAN URLACHER

Pros: One of the most dominant linebackers of his era.

Cons: Hasn't made a Pro Bowl since 2006.

» Of all the current Bears, Urlacher has the best chance. He's respected by his peers and is a game-changer when he's healthy, although his best years seem to have been years ago.

CHANCES: 🏈🏈🏈🏈🏈

MATT FORTE

Pros: Young and a major part of the offense.

Cons: Not really good at running the ball.

» His age gives him some upside, but he'll need to put together a consistent couple of years (or 10) to have a shot. And generally running backs who don't run well don't end up in Canton.

CHANCES: 🏈🏈

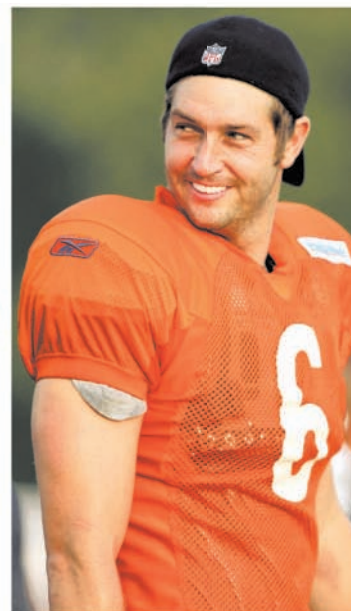

DEVIN HESTER

Pros: Arguably the greatest returner of all time.

Cons: Arguably completely mediocre at everything else.

» He might be the most dangerous player in the NFL today. He doesn't do much else, but if there is a player who deserves to be in the Hall for his special teams ability, it's Hester.

CHANCES: 🏈🏈🏈🏈

JAY CUTLER

Pros: Throws for a lot of yards and touchdowns.

Cons: Throws for a lot of yards and touchdowns—to the other team.

» Many people have compared him to Brett Favre, for better or worse (mostly worse). If he can ever win a championship, he'll be looked at in a whole new light. Just don't count on it.

CHANCES: 🏈🏈

JULIUS PEPPERS

Pros: Dominant pass rusher, gets lots of sacks.

Cons: Played for Carolina for a long time.

» With 89 career sacks, he'll likely finish with more than 100. He didn't have as good a year as Bears fans were hoping for last season. But assuming he continues to age well, he should end up in Canton.

TOPIC

How are Chicago sports like Lollapalooza?

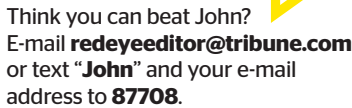

Both have Cold play.

So many stars, so little talent.

Everyone can whine about it, but when push comes to shove, you're still tuning in.

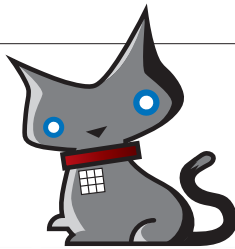

They're both loud, crowded and irresistible. And referring to baseball only: HOT.

Plenty of balls, especially in this year's lineup.

12:30 to 3 p.m. on 720 WGN.

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redeyechicago.com/puzzles. EDITED BY MICHAEL MEPHAM

Make a 2- to 7-letter word from the letters in each row. Add points of each word, using scoring directions at right. Finally, 7-letter words get a 50-point bonus. "Blanks" used as any letter have no point value. All the words are in the Official Scrabble Players Dictionary, 4th Edition. Find the answer at redeyechicago.com/puzzles.

HUNKA HUNKA CAPED HERO—IT'S OUR FIRST LOOK AT THE NEW SUPERMAN

Henry Cavill as Superman
WARNER BROS.

By Dana Moran
REDEYE

Super-wow! Warner Bros. has released the first photo of Henry Cavill all dressed up as Superman for "Man of Steel," which is shooting in the suburbs this month and starts work in Chicago in September. While there are plenty of super-traditions to keep up, this Superman manages to stand out for the flick, which is set for summer 2013. Here's a rundown of the new man in tights. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM

THE SUIT

1 While our original hero appeared to be wearing some sort of Lycra nightmare, the re-imagined Superman dons a scaly-looking suit. Maybe that means it ACTUALLY provides some protection, but isn't he supposed to fear only Kryptonite?

THE BOOTS

2 Their classic notched top must serve some purpose—making him faster than a speeding bullet, perhaps?

THE HAIR

3 Dark as night: check. Greasy as bear: check. Signature curly lock hanging down in the front: no check. It must've been distracting.

THE MUSCLES

4 Yep, they're there. Cavill doesn't look as abtacular as the cartoon crusader, but his hunched-over position may be deceiving. We'll hold off judgment until we see the real deal.

THE CAPE

5 We like our capes nice and billowy, and this one fits the job quite nicely. Just stay away from jet engine intakes—Superman can learn a lot from "The Incredibles."

THE LOGO

6 This man of steel keeps his colors close to his chest (red and yellow, naturally), but this logo's got that weird lizard skin thing going on too. We're still not crazy about it.

WARNER BROS.

Cat's out of the bag

On Friday, fanboys and girls got their first look at Anne Hathaway's Catwoman costume (left) from Christopher Nolan's "The Dark Knight Rises" and were left with one question: Where are the cat ears? OK, maybe two questions: Why is she riding the Batpod? We'll have to wait until next summer's release of the film, which stars Christian Bale as Batman.

"I'm sitting at a table with a gentleman who is better looking than you and is in better shape than me. So we're both out of a job, dude. Taylor Lautner! We're screwed."

Big draw

Fox's animated Sunday lineup with be dominated by guest stars this fall, the network announced Friday. Aron Ralston casts a "127 Hour" spell on Springfield in the annual Halloween episode of "The Simpsons," while Kiefer Sutherland will voice a former CIA agent in the Sept. 25 season premiere. Kanye West, Fergie, Nicki Minaj, Bruno Mars and "Glee" star Darren Criss will guest on "The Cleveland Show," and Ryan Reynolds (below right) will become obsessed with Peter Griffin (below left) in "Family Guy." For a complete list, go to showpatroltv.com.

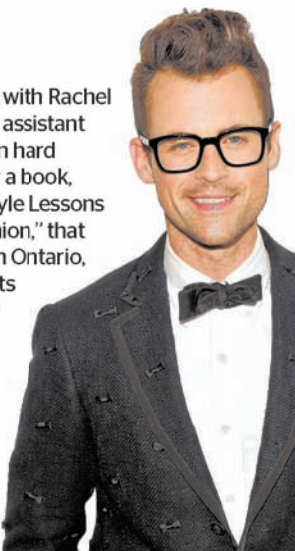

Go Shawty?

"I'm back, baby/ I'm your doctor, I could be your vodka," raps 17-year-old Justin Bieber—aka Shawty Mane—on Chris Brown's new mixtape, "Boy in Detention," which dropped Friday. The Biebs' flow isn't too bad, but his rhymes are kind of bunk: "Baby, I'm not crazy/ I got swag like Patrick Swayze."

Doing well, thanks

Since ending his Zoe-mance with Rachel Zoe months ago, her former assistant Brad Goreski (right) has been hard at work. He signed a deal for a book, "Born to Be Brad: Life and Style Lessons From the Front Lines of Fashion," that looks at his life growing up in Ontario, "where he escaped the taunts of bullies by reading fashion magazines, performing in the local children's theater group and playing stylist to Barbie," according to the Fashionologie blog. The book will be released in 2012 at the same time his new Bravo show debuts.

Nicki Minaj on Friday's 'GMA'

SHE LET ONE SLIP

Nicki Minaj's breast apparently popped out of her teensy top, which looked like a sports bra, while performing live on ABC's "Good Morning America" on Friday. An ABC network spokesperson apologized in a statement, saying, "Although we had a five-second delay in place for the Nicki Minaj concert on 'GMA,' the live East Coast feed of the concert regrettably included certain fleeting images of the performer that were taken out of later feeds of the broadcast in other time zones."
